

We wanted to begin by saying thank you for your participation in our low fidelity prototype usability tests. This will enable us to better develop our system in the long run.

Today you will be testing prototypes of an improved slack notification system. You need not do anything prior to the experiment, we only ask that you reserve 30 minutes of your time. Below we have highlighted a few point we may believe could be of help before participating in this experiment.

This is a usability test of our prototypes, not a test of your capabilities

- Please act normally and without stress

As these are prototypes it is crucial for you to vocalize your thoughts

- We can only learn so much from physical observation, please tell us what is going on in your mind as you interact with the system

Please let us know if you have any questions/concerns, otherwise we look forward to seeing you soon!
