APPENDIX 1

Page 1.1 Among Dad's friends in Garden City was one Charles P. Turner, who was chosen to be one of my godfathers. (I know not who the other was, but Aunt Violet was my godmother.) For a number of years C.P. Turner kindly sent me a book for Christmas: the books were invariably several years too old for me, but no doubt were appreciated later. When I spent a couple of weeks in New York, on my own, in 1931 (See P.42), I paid a courtesy call on Mr. & Mrs. Turner, and dined with them in their Garden City house. I have never forgotten C.P.'s remark to his wife when we were served stewed peaches for desert: "If you remember, Annie, we had stewed peaches for supper last night!"

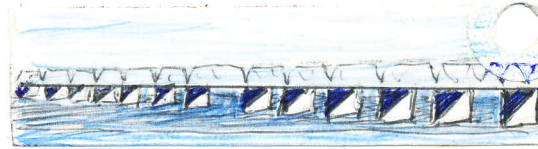

1.2 The merger was in 1922. I can remember family conversations with Dad bitterly decrying the perfidy and mismanagement of D.C. Macarow, the Merchants' general manager, whose policies, evidently long protested by Dad, apparently led to the failure and take over by the Bank of Montreal.

4.1 During WW1 there was installed at 62 Ontario ave. a sock-knitting machine which fascinated me, on which Mother & Helen used to churn out heavy wool socks for the Red Cross to send the troops in the trenches.

4.2 The concerts were held then in the Ritz Carleton ball-room and once (aged about 12?) I was taken to one and remember having pointed out to me a Mrs. Howard and two of her daughters who lived on Mountain St. I met one of the girls some 15 years later. Still later, Hazel joined the L.M.M.C., joined by me even later when men were accepted as members.

4.3 For those ignorant of Scottish history, the quip refers to the famous massacre of MacDonells by Campbells at Glencoe.

Page 6.1 Family story of Stuart (aged 11?) from the hotel window mistaking the multiple piers of the Victoria Bridge, caught by a certain angle of sunlight, for a sailboat race.

11.1 Stanton's move to Ottawa came when I was able to get him a job in the Construction Control (page 60, top) following his army discharge. He later joined a broker's Ottawa office - having earlier been a partner with his brother Hugh in their own Montreal firm. He was a heavy smoker, which contributed to his death from emphysema, Ottawa 1957.

14.1 We "lived" in the 1st. Floor living room: The drawing room downstairs was used for rare dinner parties and Mother's infrequent teas, Helen's piano playing, and Hilda's wedding. (Helen was married from the Boulevard house.)

15.1 "Dr. Penfield" named for the founder of the Montreal Neurological Institute, whose family were friends of the Howard family. Blvd. Penfield was originally called McGregor St. and ran only from Simpson to Côte des Neiges.

16.1 Morgan's (founded by our friend Bartlett M's grandfather) is now "The Bay". Goodwin's is now Eaton's. Other stores included Murphy's, taken over and rebuilt by Simpson's; Ogilvy's; Henderson's men's wear; Joyce's confectioners (on Phillips Square south); Gatehouse for fish. Our milk came from Elmhurst Dairy, our bread from Dent Harrison, and we drank Laurentian water delivered in huge bottles every other day or so. (See: "Les Trains de Mon Enfance")

19.1 My last visits to Metis were when for several summers I would drive Helen and Ernest down in their car, spend a night or two at the Boule Rock, and take the train home, returning by train six weeks later to drive them back to town. This about 1970-74?

Page 21.1 I learned, under stress, to swim some years later while on a cruise at Madeira. Having managed a feeble cross between dog-paddle and breast stroke to accompany my ship-board girl friend out to a rather distant raft, I was told that a row of buoys I had not previously noted were supposedly to support a ^{missing} protective shark net: returning to shore I seem to have achieved a spectacular fast crawl.

21.2 Fleet's Lake was owned (and lent us) by our Ontario Avenue neighbours, who were also Metisites.

26.1 One day Stanton Mathewson and I paddled out and went aboard the "Edamena". Unfortunately the canoe's painter came loose from the gangplank and the canoe drifted off while we were below decks. Hilda and Mother saw it from our verandah and (and this may illustrate a bad Merrett trait of imagining the worst) Hilda concluded that we had upset, and knowing my swimming incapability, assumed that we had both drowned. Stanton in an effort to save me. One of the yacht's crew, in its dinghy, retrieved the canoe and we returned home to find Hilda still prostrated from shock, and Mother not much better off.

27.1 -correction: mostly Toronto males. The Nicols from Montreal had a house next door. Two of the three Nicol boys were about my age and we spent a lot of time together until an incident of childish misunderstanding. For some unknown reason they reported to their mother that I had said something uncomplimentary about their father - which I certainly had not! Mrs. Nicol, a proud martinet, forbade the boys ever to play with me again. They did, of course, secretly, and our respective older siblings remained good friends, but it was at least 20 years before Mrs. Nicol spoke to Mother again.

Page 29.1 For a while I used to get a ride to school every morning with Taylor, chauffeur to the Archie Griers who lived on McKay St. but kept their car overnight in the George Grier's garage across the street from us.

on Ontario ave.

30.1 See 'photo of school group in M.A.A. gym.

31.1 Huntly Drummond was George's uncle and then President of the Bank of Montreal. He used to drive a sports Bugatti. The only other one I ever saw in Montreal belonged to Wilson McConnell, a few years later, and I went with him to get his car off the ship and drove with him out to his family house in Dorval. (The McConnells owned the Montreal "Star" and "Standard," for which our firm built 2 buildings. John McC, the last publisher, was also my friend.)

(imported from Italy)

1 (A.1.5)

34.1 i.e. the 2nd gymnasium. I was later commissioned to design a new gym and junior school classrooms and dormitories: the project was aborted because the funding campaign fell short of the goal (and our office lost money!) a 3rd new gym is now (1984-5) under construction.

40.1 During that brief Christmas break I must have attended at least 4 debutante dances. My eligibility for these affairs spanned a few years at McGill. They involved tails (which I had to buy for myself because Dad refused, considering me too young - and after all he had never had any such fancy rags at my age - nor probably had Stuart, though the girls undoubtedly "came out" at the appropriate age - but my contemporaries all wore them.) A deb dance was usually preceded by a dinner party for 3 or 4 couples. Having first, de rigueur, favoured their dates with a camelia corsage delivered by McKenna the Florist, the boys called for their dates in a taxi, and after the dance escorted them home. The dances were generally at the Ritz, occasionally at a house (e.g. Morgau's, or Webster's) if large enough.

Sometimes at the Ritz, on the strength of champagne at supper, things got a little out of hand, with a bit of bunk throwing across the beautiful Adams dining room. A few of the more worldly (bad) boys were known to carry a flask for the evening, but my particular crowd were too well behaved for that. Then there were also the "grown-up" balls - the Charity & the St. Andrews especially - at the Mount Royal or Windsor hotels, where some girls (whose fathers could not afford a private do) made their formal debuts. As another facet of this social whirl, it was also the thing to do to take a girl to the McGill Saturday football games at the Molson Stadium, and afterward to a "the dancout" at one of the hotels. "Jack Denny and his Mount Royal Hotel Dance Orchestra" was one of the favourite bands, along with that of Izzie Aspler, a McGill student who played a great clarinet! There were also fraternity parties. It was important not to allow these pleasures to interfere with College work, especially Christmas exams which occasionally fell on a morning after an early morning return from a ball. Of my class of 6 at McGill, Dick Eve was the only other member of the "set".

43.1 At one point during those last weeks at college, I was feeling a bit cocky and thought I might have a chance at coming first, and actually asked Dad if he would finance my trip so that I could turn down the scholarship in favour of Monty. Dad pointed out that Monty's uncle was the most successful corporate lawyer in town, implying that any subsidy could come from him, if not from Monty's father who was a not-well-off country doctor. There was no subsidy coming up for Monty, however, when his one year scholarship ran out and he had to come home from Europe. (Did his uncle fail him, or was he too proud to ask?)

"Deb" Days?

Page 45.1 In fact, I don't think I knew about the renewable feature until sometime later. As for Monty's frustration or jealousy it certainly never showed, and being Monty he was probably better off having to buckle down to earn and learn, rather than carry on a subsidized life as I did, which put me two years behind him in practical experience, and very probably contributed to my innate laziness in later years.

45.2 Östberg got as tiddly as any of us, and at one point was singing his own Swedish translation of "Mary had a little lamb".

48.1 Hitler? Did I later imagine this? My diary says it was a Communist rally in the Lustgarten, but I am sure it was in fact Nazi!

51.1 #13 rue Blondel was an internationally known bordello

52.1 The railway tunnel was disused, boarded up at each end with a small door, very dark inside, and it certainly seemed like half a mile. Possibly a smuggler's route? (unlikely, since there was a customs house by the Swiss portal)

54.1 Shortly after we had scrambled over tumbled trees and rocks we were greeted by the amazed occupant of a lone chalet who had noted our route and told us it was the first time it had ever been traversed in winter!

56.1 The "Melmore Head" (I was the only passenger) a freighter of the Head Line; my passage arranged by Dad's friend Mr. Eakin, father of my friend Bill who, as Montreal agent of the line, like his father, set up our 1961 trip when Hazel, Brian and I sailed to Dublin in the owner's and pilot's cabins of the "Inishowen Head" on its return maiden voyage.

59.1 A number of architect and engineer friends and contemporaries were engaged in civilian war jobs, including Montgomery and Marshall, while others were in uniform but following normal 9 to 5 office routines in Montreal and Ottawa. A few others saw active service in the three armed services, and one good friend, George Auld (whose car I had borrowed for for the Cambridge Ball party*) was killed in the Air Force while training in Canada. * P. 56.

61.1 The day before the exhibit opened I went on the air with a 5 minute plug for it. When Hazel told Mother to turn on her radio at 7 pm., and why, Mother's reply was "Oh what a shame, that's when we sit down to dinner and we'll miss him." (Dr. Chas. Martin, later a Semenville neighbour, was President of the Art gallery & allowed the red stair.)

65.1 "offers": i.e. "let's discuss it." Besides the Barott office, I was also approached by Fetherstonhaugh & Durnford, Lawson & Little, and (prompted by our friend Brooke Claxton, then Minister of National Defense) by National Health & Welfare. (Correction - Brooke had by then shifted to Minister of N.H. & W.) There was also Ross Wiggs, to make 4 approach

65.2 We were involved in "Expo'67" as associates for the Govt. of India pavilion, and also did 3 smaller buildings. I persuaded the firm to relinquish our commission for "Man & His Health" to Arthur Erikson because I thought he would do a better job!!

66.1 And I was sent by D.N.D. to Edmonton re The planning of the Air Base at Namao, followed by a two week trip to Washington to study American air base planning in The Pentagon. (*NOT DUE TO BROOKE CLAXTON!)

66.2 Disagreements brought on by the rather arrogant and irritating behaviour of both Marshall and Elliot, and the rather greedy and devious activities of Mill and Ross in Kingston. The firm name, which had reached the ungainly "Marshall & Merrett; Stahl, Elliot, Mill & Ross" shrank to M, M, S & E; then with Marshall's retirement to M, S & E; and with mine to S & E; and soon thereafter to S. alone, and quickly enlarged to Stahl & Nicolaidis, who, in January '85 are still struggling to survive.

Page 67.1 Hazel at the time was Philip Fisher's secretary at Southern Press where she continued to work for a few years until she became secretary to Dr. Cyril James, Principal of McGill, until in 1942 she retired to motherhood.

68.1 Following my Selwyn House precedent of free transport to school (see 29.1), I managed to get driven from McGill Street home for lunch, and back, every day by Clive Beatty who lived near us on Stanley Street.

72.1 Our Rothesay & Saint John friends included: Teed, Flood; Chapman; Turnbull; McAvity; Jolly; artists Ted Campbell, Avery Shaw; poet P.K. (Pat) Page.

A1:4.1 The McConnells lived first on Redpath Street, directly behind our Ontario Ave. house, and later in the huge Italianate mansion on Steyning Ave. (below Cedar Ave, and above Pine Ave) where in Selwyn House days John would entertain me with a concert of his newest records. When, married, he lived on Redpath Crescent, he had me do several alterations to his house. One of these jobs was still not complete, as it should have been, when John and wife Peggy returned from a trip abroad. Somewhat annoyed and to avoid the painters, they escaped to a suite, on the top floor of the Ritz, which happened to be directly under a new penthouse apartment still under construction which we were building for Ritz manager Jean Contat. At 3 a.m. one rainy night I had a frantic call from Jean to say there was a leak in the roof causing a copious drip directly onto the bed of a very important guest. It was a while before I had the courage to tell John that the penthouse job was ours too. John, by the way, gave me my big Emily Carr.

86.1 Montreal's World Exhibition "Expo '67" (I went 35 times) and its ten annual reincarnations - "Man & His World" - (wound up in 1977 by "Expo +10" celebration for participants), along with a related festival in 1967 of great international theatre, opera, music, etc., was an unforgettable experience.

I went to the Fair 35 times, including the day, towards the end, when the 50 millionth visitor was rung in. We also went to most of the participating countries' national theatre & dance, opera & ballet events (Place des Arts), and we tried many of the various national restaurants, bars & pubs! Expo '67 was a tremendously successful exhibition, & and altogether a great & exciting experience. And we returned each summer for 10 years, including a party in 1977, "Expo + 10" for all who had participated in the original Fair production - as did our firm.
